Welcome from the Principal
The University of Glasgow is committed to building community through diversity. The great joy and excitement of attending university is more than the thrill of researching and learning about the ideas and knowledge that have shaped our world. It’s about meeting other people from other backgrounds – social, ethnic, cultural – and learning from them.

The breadth of our University community embraces the breadth of the religion and belief communities in the world. I believe it is important that as a university we are able to support and encourage you to celebrate with us our richness and diversity.

The Interfaith Chaplaincy is core to this approach. This Guide introduces you to the beliefs of most of the people who bring such a great richness to life in the University of Glasgow. I commend it to you.

Professor Anton Muscatelli
Principal and Vice-Chancellor
The Interfaith Chaplain to the University is the Reverend Stuart D MacQuarrie. The Catholic Chaplain is Father John Keenan. The Chaplaincy website is at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/chaplaincy.

The University of Glasgow is well served with places for worship, prayer and reflection. Space is provided at the University Chapel, the University Interfaith Room, the University library, the Veterinary School quiet room, Turnbull Hall, and there is a room for students and staff in Public Health. At the Dental School, prayer and reflection can take place in available seminar rooms. Meetings and events also take place in these places. The Chaplaincies are friendly, welcoming places open to students and staff of all faith/non-faith backgrounds or denominations. The University is strongly committed to interfaith working and became the first ‘Friend’ of the Scottish Inter Faith Council (SIFC). Religion and Belief communities and student societies – with the support of the Chaplaincies – arrange programmes of interesting and stimulating events.

Chaplains/Advisers provide a valuable resource for students and staff. Chaplains/Advisers are drawn from faith communities which are members of the SIFC, and Christian churches which are members of Action Together of Churches in Scotland. The University is the first higher education institution to appoint a Humanist to the Chaplaincy team as an Adviser for people from a non-faith background.

Weddings and Civil Partnerships
The University is a very popular wedding and civil partnership venue. The University Chapel and ceremonial rooms make a wonderful setting. At least one of the couple in a wedding or civil partnership ceremony must be a graduate (or son or daughter of a graduate), member of staff or current student (or a son or daughter). The link on the Chaplaincy website will give you plenty of advice and information and there is a Weddings Organiser to make your big day go as smoothly as possible.

Venerable K Sri Rewatha Thero has been a Theravada Buddhist monk for almost 30 years. He is the head monk of Scotland’s Buddhist Vihara which he was instrumental in founding in 2002. In 2009, in recognition of his extensive experience and varied achievements, he was appointed Chief Sangha Nayaka (chief monk) of the UK. He is at present teaching religious and moral education in one of the leading Edinburgh secondary schools. He was Deputy Principal of the Buddhist Monks’ Training College in Sri Lanka and is currently undertaking a research degree on Mindfulness Approaches to Health and Social Care at the University of Bangor, Wales.

As the Buddhist chaplain to the University, he would like to meet students and members of the staff from any faith or non-faith backgrounds. He would like to provide traditional Buddhist services and secular mindfulness meditation for the University community.
Equality & Diversity Unit
Equality and diversity is of primary importance to the University of Glasgow. In August 2007 we established the Scottish Higher Education sector’s first dedicated Equality & Diversity Unit (EDU). The Unit Director is Naseem Anwar and is responsible for promoting and embedding all aspects of equality and diversity with the University community.

University Equality Statement
The University of Glasgow is committed to promoting equality in all its activities and aims to provide a work, learning, research and teaching environment free from discrimination and unfair treatment.

Religion or Belief in the University
The University of Glasgow celebrates and values the diversity of its students, staff and visitors. It aims to create an environment where the cultural, religious, non-religious or philosophical beliefs of all are respected. The University will strive to create a positive environment through education and awareness raising of cultures and religion or similar philosophical beliefs and will actively promote tolerance within its community.

To support the University’s aim, Professor David Fearn (Dean of Learning and Teaching in the College of Science and Engineering) has been appointed as Religion & Belief Champion. The Religion & Belief Champion promotes and raises awareness around Religion and Belief equality issues. He also acts as chair of the Religion & Belief Equality Group.

The University welcomed the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003 which allowed us to ensure all our policies and procedures are fair and equal to all those of faith, or other philosophical belief (including non-belief). The full version of the University’s policy on Religion or Belief can be found on page 26 of this guide.

The Scottish Inter Faith Council (SIFC) encourages and supports initiatives aimed at increasing mutual understanding and respect between the members of all religious communities. It is dedicated in its work to break down and diffuse barriers of discrimination and prejudice and promote tolerance and acceptance within society. The University of Glasgow became the first Friend of the SIFC in 2005.

As well as promoting better understanding between faith communities, the SIFC can function as a vehicle of communication between the Scottish Executive and the various communities living in Scotland. Collectively it represents a major cross section of the faith communities in Scotland. Its representative members are committed to the process of developing inter faith structures at both local and national levels.

The Baha’i Faith

The Baha’i Faith began in Persia on 23rd May 1844, when a person known as the Bab (Gate) proclaimed that he was a Messenger from God and also the herald of ‘the Promised One’, a messenger greater than himself. He and his followers were severely persecuted by the Persian authorities and the Bab was finally executed in 1850.

In 1863 a person known as Baha’u’llah (the Glory of God) claimed to be the one whose coming the Bab had foretold. He announced that he had come to help bring about a new age of global civilisation which would be characterised by unity and peace. Because of his personal influence and powerful teachings Baha’u’llah was banished from Persia, and later exiled to the prison fortress of Akka in Palestine. He died at a place called Bahji near Akka in 1892. Baha’u’llah’s shrine in Bahji is today the holiest shrine of the Baha’i world and is both the spiritual and physical focus of the Baha’i global community.

Basic beliefs

The Baha’i Faith is an independent world religion which proclaims the oneness of God, religion and humankind. Baha’is believe that God reveals His purpose progressively through prophets such as the founders of all the major world religions which exist today. Key Baha’i beliefs are, belief in one God; the unity of mankind; independent investigation of truth; the common foundation of all religions; the essential harmony of science and religion; equality of opportunity for men and women; elimination of prejudice of all kinds; universal compulsory education; the need for a universal auxiliary language; abolition of extremes of wealth and poverty; the protection of religious and cultural diversity, and the establishment of universal peace by a world government which will have international courts of justice.

Customs and practices
Baha’i custom and practice is founded on authenticated scripture written by Baha’u’llah. The focus of Baha’i community life is the Nineteen Day Feast when local Baha’is meet to worship, discuss the affairs of their faith and have fellowship together. Obligations on individual Baha’is include daily prayer and keeping a yearly nineteen day fast when no food is consumed from sunrise to sunset. The affairs of the Baha’i Faith are administered by ‘Spiritual Assemblies’ which consist of nine people elected by the Baha’i community. These democratic assemblies operate at local, national and international level. The international administrative body is known as the Universal House of Justice and is based on Mount Carmel in Israel.

Places of worship
Worldwide, the Baha’i Faith has a temple on every continent where Baha’is and people of every faith can come and worship God. Depending on the size of their community, Baha’is may worship at their local centre or meet to worship in individual homes.

Festivals
Festivals and holy days are based on the birthdays of important figures of the Baha’i Faith or significant events in the history of the faith. The birthday of Baha’u’llah, for example, would be an important holy day and is celebrated on the 12th of November.

Food and diet
Baha’is do not have food laws as such but are advised to eat moderately and keep to a balanced, healthy diet. They do not drink alcohol and drug-taking is not allowed unless prescribed by a competent doctor.

Concerns of the community
Baha’is are concerned about anything that leads to conflict or disunity in the community or in the world. To this end, they are encouraged to support activities which further one or all of the principles of their faith. Baha’is are encouraged to protect the interests of their community and country but are also expected to take on the role and responsibility of world citizens.
Buddhism

Buddhism is based on the teachings of the Buddha Shakyamuni who lived in Northern India about 2500 years ago. A Buddha is to be revered, not as a God, but as an example of how we should all aspire to live our lives.

Basic beliefs
The essence of Buddha is within each of us and we can all attain our Buddhahood through sincere practice of the Eight-Fold Noble Path, which includes virtuous conduct such as compassion and generosity, meditation and the cultivation of wisdom.

Many Buddhists are believers in spiritual rebirth but this is understood as a causal connection between lives rather than the transmigration or reincarnation of an unchanging individual soul. For most Western Buddhists faith in the efficacy of following the eight-fold path is more central than assent to specific verbal formulations of religious belief.

Customs and practices
Although it is particularly strong in northern areas of the Indian subcontinent and in some parts of South East Asia, Buddhism is a world wide religion. Many Eastern Buddhist traditions started becoming established in the West during the 20th Century. This was the case in Scotland where we now have perhaps as many as ten schools from several traditions represented.

These include the Theravadan tradition (originally mainly from India, Sri Lanka, Burma and Thailand) which has meditation groups in several Scottish cities; the Tibetan tradition, (which has a wide influence through northern India, and China to Mongolia) of which three schools are active, the best known being the Kagyu school with its main centre at Samye Ling near Langholm and meditation groups in most main Scottish cities; and the Zen Buddhist tradition, (which originated in China, spread to Korea, Japan and Malaysia) and is most strongly represented in Scotland by the Soto Zen School which has a priory in Edinburgh and meditation groups in several cities.

Places of worship
The term ‘worship’ is not really appropriate to Buddhism, where there is no belief in a separate creator God. Buddhist temples, centres or meeting places are where Buddhists gather to meditate, study, chant or pray together.

There are a number of such centres in Scotland ranging from the large Tibetan tradition temple at Samye Ling together with its retreat centre on Holy Island and the Glasgow Buddhist Centre to smaller institutions and retreat centres in Portobello, Dundee and elsewhere. Some groups make use of hired premises or meet together in private homes.
Main festivals
Buddhists have many celebrations throughout the year. These generally commemorate particular events of the Buddha’s life and include his birth (Wesak), his enlightenment, the day of his first teaching (Dharma Day) and his death (Parinirvana). The dates of these events are generally expressed through the lunar calendar and there is some variation between the different traditions. Some Buddhists may also fast on New Moon and Full Moon days.

Food and diet
Although their high valuation of life and their rejection of violence means that some Buddhists are vegetarian, this is not always the case.

Concerns of the community
One of the steps on the Eight-Fold Noble Path is the practice of ‘right livelihood’ and this has promoted a tendency in western Buddhists to seek employment within what are referred to as the ‘caring professions’. They also support such initiatives within the community as Angulimala (the Buddhist Prison chaplaincy service) and hospital chaplaincy. A significant proportion of Buddhists are also actively engaged in movements promoting justice and peace.

Christianity was founded in what is today modern day Israel and Palestine around 2000 years ago. It is based on the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, known as Christ. This means ‘the anointed one’, and Christians believe Jesus to be the Son of God. Christians see themselves as following in the way of Jesus who revealed the forgiving love of God for all people and God’s concern for human beings.

Basic beliefs
At the centre of Christian belief is Jesus, who is regarded as the revelation of God. For many Christians this revelation is such that he is understood to be the very incarnation of God. In Jesus, Christians come to know something of the nature of God who is seen as loving and forgiving. Jesus is regarded as the one who has transformed human nature so that it need no longer follow its sinful inclinations but rather lead a life of love and service. Their experience of God in Jesus has led them to see God as a community of three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, called the Trinity. Christians believe that the world was created by God and will be brought to its fulfilment at the end of time. In the mean time they believe in the presence and support of God’s spirit among all. The Christian holy book is called the Bible and is in two parts. The first equates roughly to the Jewish Bible has been called the Old Testament. The second is the New Testament which contains the Gospels (records of Jesus’ life and his teachings), the Acts of the Apostles, the writings of Saint Paul and some other works.

Customs and practice
Individuals are admitted into the Christian Church through baptism which can take place in childhood or adulthood. The central ritual of much Christian worship is Holy Communion or Eucharist which is a sharing of bread and wine in memory of Jesus’ last supper with his disciples. This action unites Christians in a symbolic or sacramental way with the death and resurrection of Jesus and one another. It can also act as a recommitment to follow in the path set out by Jesus’ life and example. Private prayer and meditation is important to Christians in their daily life.
Places of worship
The Christian holy day takes place on a Sunday when congregations gather in churches to worship and celebrate Holy Communion. In the Catholic tradition this takes place weekly and even daily while in some Protestant churches it takes place on a monthly basis or even annually.

Main festivals
Important dates in the Christian Calendar include Christmas, the celebration of Jesus’ birth (25 December), and the central Christian feast of Easter that commemorates the death (on Good Friday) and resurrection (on Easter Sunday) of Jesus. The exact dates for Easter vary from year to year but are usually around the end of March or beginning of April. The forty days before Easter are known as Lent and it is common for many Christians to make some form of self-sacrifice during this time, such as fasting or going without something for this period. It is also a time for increased prayer and helping others. Pentecost, which celebrates the coming of God’s Spirit, and is thought of as the birth of the Church, is also an important festival.

Food and diet
In Christianity, all is seen as a gift of God. This means that no food is seen as unclean but everything is to be enjoyed in moderation and gratitude. Fasting on particular days and at particular times of the year is also common.

Concerns of the community
Christians are concerned about working for the values of God’s kingdom on Earth: justice, peace and reconciliation. They are concerned for justice for all people and so are involved with justice, peace and development issues. Working together with others for the common good of the nation and the world is important for them.

The Hindu tradition has no founder and is best understood as a group of closely connected religious traditions rather than a single religion. It represents a complete way of life. Hindus believe in one God and worship that one God under many manifestations or images. They believe that all prayers addressed to any form or manifestation will ultimately reach the one God. Hinduism does not prescribe any particular dogmas; rather it asks individuals to worship God according to their own belief. It therefore allows a great deal of freedom in matters of faith and worship.

Basic beliefs
Hindus consider that religion is a sanctified and disciplined path one should follow to reach a higher level of consciousness or goal (to become a better person). This can only be done by following the path of Dharma. Dharma is at the heart of Hinduism which is often called the Sanatana Dharma. Dharma means the ancient law which underlies the order of the universe and is reflected in a moral and ethical life. Hindus believe in the law of karma – a simple law of cause and effect. ‘As you sow, so shall you reap’. They also believe in the divine nature of the soul, which is indestructible and immortal. It transmigrates from body to body depending on the merits and sins of one’s actions (karma) accumulated in a lifetime. In the end, one’s karma (action) determines one’s future rebirth.

Hindus further believe in the descent (avatar) of Divinity to protect the righteous and destroy the unrighteous. There have been several examples of this in Hinduism including Rama, Krishna and Buddha. They serve as an example and inspiration for pious Hindus. In one sense Hindus accept the prophets of all religions as manifestations or avatars of God and recognise the presence of God in all living beings.
Customs and practices

Prayer and the reading of the Holy Scriptures, which give Hindus an example of how they should live, are important practices. Worship or veneration of the divine image takes place around a shrine morning or evening in devout Hindu homes. There are two kinds of scripture in Hinduism: the holiest texts, called the Vedas, and the great epics of the Mahabharata and Ramayana. The Bhagavad Gita, which is part of the Mahabharata, is a very popular text in the West. Hindus follow the lunar calendar and particular days are set aside during the week and month to honour particular manifestations of God.

Places of worship

Hindus frequently view systematic organisation with some mistrust, believing it to be often showy and wasteful. Likewise, worship and general religious activity are commonly centred around the home. However Hindu temples or Mandirs, which have a priest, educated in the scriptures, do have public worship twice daily and Sunday has become a day for communal worship and activity. Only trained priests are able to perform religious ceremonies on special occasions though anyone may perform puja.

Main festivals

There are many religious festivals which are celebrated in different ways by different communities. The most commonly celebrated festivals are Diwali (or Deepavali), the Festival of Lights, and Navrathri, nine nights during which goddesses such as Durga, the Great Mother, are worshipped. This takes place over nine days and nights twice a year.

Food and diet

The influence of charity is apparent in the importance attached to hospitality: every pious Hindu is expected to keep some food aside for an unexpected guest and no-one should ever be turned away hungry. The reverence for life surfaces again in the concept of ahimsa (non-injury), one of the highest principles which encourages many Hindus to be vegetarian.

Concerns of the community

Hindus should show love and respect for all beings as a way of recognising the divinity within all creatures. Charity is extremely important. It is generally practiced in a discreet, individual manner, and is seen as a means of extending the natural love for the family into the wider community. Hindus also have a concern for the future of their young people and offer support to all members of their community, particularly vulnerable groups such as the elderly.

Humanism is a diverse movement with ancient roots that reflects the views of millions of people around the world, the outcome of a long tradition of free thought. It is a coherent moral and ethical standpoint independent of religion, an ethical way of life that comes from within all of us, which extends to all people, irrespective of their chosen life styles or personal decisions and views, that most fundamental of welcomes which assures them of fairness, compassion and tolerance.

‘Humanism is a democratic and ethical life stance, which affirms that human beings have the right and responsibility to give meaning and shape to their own lives. It stands for the building of a more humane society through an ethic based on human and other natural values in the spirit of reason and free inquiry through human capabilities. It is not theistic, and it does not accept supernatural views of reality.’ IHEU (International Humanist and Ethical Union).
Basic beliefs
The core of Humanism is that it is a way of being that brings out the best in people. Human Rights law is important to all humanist organisations globally, they endorse the principles of humanitarian ideals that are enshrined in such declarations, covenants and conventions, as well as universal initiatives which promote the peaceful co-habitation of all the world’s people, especially through the United Nations. Essentially, its beliefs and fundamental principles are embodied in ‘The Amsterdam Declaration 2002’. Humanism is a belief in the advancement and understanding of humanity through its own efforts.

Customs and practices
This is not relevant on a collective permanent basis as customs and practices are determined on a personal basis with the foundations of reason, experience and compassion at the centre. Registered Humanist Celebrants do conduct non-religious ceremonies to observe life rites (eg birth, coming of age, marriage, death) and other public and private occasions.

Places of worship
The term worship is not relevant to Humanism, Humanists meet regularly in all main centres of population to talk, learn and share ideas, to debate, discuss and campaign on social and moral issues, and to socialise and celebrate life and significant events.

Main festivals
Humanists celebrate rites of passage; they may observe commonly taken holidays and may incline towards nature-based celebrations. Many Humanists now celebrate Darwin Day on 12 February.

Food and diet
There are no special dietary requirements, this is down to individual choice.

Concerns of the community
Human endeavour is the main concern of the Humanist community worldwide – what we do, why we do it, how we do it and what the outcome will be. Humanists aim to create an open and inclusive society, and so campaign for a secular state and for secular education. Most importantly, because Humanists believe that only humankind can solve its problems, its main concern is that peace, harmony and sustainability can and must prevail on earth by human will and effort, and that this can only be via conscious collective means at this point in our evolution.

The Muslims’ religion and way of life, spiritually and materially, is Islam. Islam is an Arabic word which means submission to God. The root of the word Islam comes from a word meaning peace and it is the way of peace as laid down in the Quran. The word can also mean submission and it is through submission to God’s will that a Muslim finds peace. Islam is a world religion that originated in the Middle East in the seventh century CE. Now it is practised by about a fifth of the world’s population. Muslims originally came to live in Scotland in the early 1940s mainly from Pakistan or India. Thereafter others came from Africa and the Middle East.

Basic beliefs
At the heart of Muslim belief is belief in the unity and universality of God. The Arabic word Allah means the One God. Muslims also believe in the unity of mankind, under one father, Adam, and have a strong sense of the Muslim community or Ummah and are aware of their solidarity with all Muslims worldwide. Muslims recognise the prophets such as Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Moses and Jesus, and see Mohammed (peace be upon him) as the last and final prophet. Mohammed (pbuh) was born in Makah in 570 CE. He received the Holy revelation from God through the Angel Gabriel over a period of 23 years. This revelation was recorded in Islam’s Holy Book known as the Quran, which is regarded as the literal word of God. Muslims are taught to recite the Quran in Arabic as any translation of the Holy Book is seen as inadequate.

Customs and practices
Islam has two principal bases of faith. The first is that there is no god worthy of worship but the one universal God (Allah), creator and sustainer of all beings. The second is that Mohammed (pbuh) is his messenger. Islam has five pillars that represent the foundation stones of Islamic worship and action:

- Shahadah: There is no God but the one true God and Mohammed is his messenger. Reciting this with intention three times makes someone a Muslim.
- Salat: Prayer takes place five times a day at given times. It involves a prescribed sequence of kneeling and standing postures and is made facing Makkah.
- Zakat: Two and a half percentage of a Muslim’s assets over a given specified amount is given in welfare tax to benefit the poor and needy each year.
- Hajj: This is an annual pilgrimage to Makkah which takes place at a fixed time of the calendar. It is a requirement at least once in a lifetime for those who can afford it.
- Sawm: During the month of Ramadan, Muslims are required to abstain from food, drink and sexual acts from dawn until sunset. The ill, old and travellers are exempt.
Main festivals
Ramadan is the ninth month of the Islamic Lunar Calendar and the month of the Islamic fast. The appearance of the new moon at the end of Ramadan marks the beginning of the festival of Eid ul Fitr. During this festival Muslims visit the Mosque, give charity, exchange presents and cards and celebrate with family and friends. Eid ul Adha coincides with the completion of the pilgrimage to Makkah. It is celebrated by pilgrims and non-pilgrims alike and unites the whole Islamic community, the Ummah with the Hajj. At this time Muslims offer sacrifices of lambs or other animals to commemorate the sacrifice of Abraham’s son.

Food and diet
Muslims differentiate between food which is allowed (halal), and food which is forbidden (haram). Pork, any other part of the pig, carnivorous animals or blood are haram. Meat must also be slaughtered according to biblical rites by a Muslim butcher. The consumption of intoxicants is also forbidden. Halal chicken is served in the University’s restaurants.

Concerns of the community
The Muslim community is concerned about the recent increase in Islamophobia and wants to rectify wrong images of Islam.

Places of worship
Prayer can take place anywhere and often a rug is used to mark out the place of prayer. The word Mosque means a place of prostration and can refer to any place of prayer. Purpose built Mosques will be used for communal prayer, community gatherings.

Quranic education and the gathering together for the traditional Friday mid-day sermon. These Mosques are often characterised by their dome and minaret, the tall tower from which the call to prayer has traditionally come. No images representing a living being are allowed in the Mosque, which could be decorated very artistically using calligraphy.

i-Syllabus course
The i-Syllabus is a confessional Islamic Studies course offering Muslim students the essential teachings of their faith in a way that takes account the challenges of contemporary life. The higher aims of the Sacred law – as well as its spiritual tradition – are explored, with the aim of providing a balanced understanding of what ‘Faith and Practice’ mean in a Muslim context. Contact the student society for more information.
Judaism

Judaism is a truly ancient religion which has been practised for five and a half thousand years. It is based on the belief in the one true and universal God.

Basic beliefs
Jews believe in the Torah (Divine Law) which was revealed to Moses and which is unchanging. They also believe in one God who is omniscient and who will reward the righteous and punish the wicked at the end of time when there will be a resurrection of all the dead. Jews are still awaiting the Messiah who they believe has still to come.

Customs and practices
There are several basic tenets by which Jews must live their lives – to carry out the Ten Commandments and to live according to Jewish values that are based on love of neighbour and tolerance of one’s fellow human beings.

Places of worship
Jewish people worship in a synagogue, which is often a centre for the many aspects of communal life. On the Eastern wall, facing Jerusalem, is an ‘ark’, or closed, usually curtained, cupboard where the ‘Sifrei Torah’ or holy scrolls of the five books of Moses (the first five books of the Hebrew Bible) are kept. These are made of parchment, are hand-written by scribes and are treated with great care and reverence. They are removed during some services and read from by the Rabbi or other members of the synagogue on the ‘Bimah’. This is a raised platform, either on the front of the ark or in the centre of the synagogue, from which prayers are also led.

All males and married females are required to cover their heads inside the synagogue. In an orthodox synagogue, men and women sit separately whereas in liberal or reformed synagogues, they sit together.
Main Festivals
There are a number of festivals throughout the calendar. These include the Jewish New Year, which normally occurs in September or October and is marked by two days of reflection and prayer. Ten days after this comes Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. This is the most solemn day of the Jewish calendar and is spent in prayer and a 25 hour fast. In the spring there is Pesach, or Passover which commemorates the delivery from slavery in Israel. Shabbat (the Jewish Sabbath) begins before nightfall on Friday and lasts until the sighting of the first three stars on Saturday night. It should be observed as a day of rest and most Orthodox Jews will not write, travel, work or cook during it. There are three daily services in the synagogue, with longer services on Saturday and festival mornings.

Food and diet
Judaism also has a number of dietary laws. Food that has been prepared in a ritually acceptable way is known as ‘kosher’. For meat to be considered kosher it must have been prepared correctly, normally under rabbinical supervision. Some meat such as pork and rabbit will not be considered kosher. Meat and dairy products should not be taken at the same meal and fish without scales or fins are also non-kosher.

Obviously, the extent to which these laws are upheld will depend on the individual. However, after many centuries of dispersal from their original homeland in the Middle East most Jews staying in Scotland will feel intrinsically Scottish, and their lifestyle is likely to reflect this.

Concerns of the community
They include: maintaining the ability to uphold the religious rituals of circumcision and Jewish dietary laws, ensuring facilities to comply with Jewish practices of swift burial, and raising awareness among hospital staff of the specific needs of Jewish patients, particularly when dying and after death. Some Jews have concern regarding non-Jewish religious observance in schools and there are also some issues relating to organ donation. A continuing and on-going concern of all Jews is the manifestation of anti-semitism.

Paganism, with its roots in the indigenous, pre-Christian religions of Europe, has evolved and adapted to the circumstances of modern life. Its re-emergence in Scotland parallels that observed in other Western countries, where it has been growing rapidly since the 1950s. The social infrastructure of Paganism reflects the value the community places on unity in diversity, consisting of a polycentric network of interrelated traditions and local groups served by a number of larger organisations. In Scotland the Pagan Federation acts as an educational and representative body liaising with government and other relevant bodies on behalf of the Pagan community.
Basic beliefs

Pagans understand Deity to be manifest within nature and recognise Divinity as taking many forms, finding expression in Goddesses as well as Gods. Goddess worship is one of the primary characteristics of Paganism. Pagans believe that nature is sacred and that the natural cycles of birth, growth and death observed in the world around us carry profoundly spiritual meanings. Human beings are seen as part of nature, woven into the great web of life along with other animals, trees, stones, plants and everything else that is of this earth. Most Pagans believe in some form of reincarnation, viewing death as a transition within a continuing process of existence. In Paganism, spiritual truths find expression in mythopoetic and symbolic forms rather than through doctrine, and reflect a synergy of polytheistic, pantheistic and animistic understandings of the divine.

Customs and practices

Pagan ethics emphasise the responsible exercise of personal freedom in trying to live in harmony with others, and with nature. Pagans frequently use the phrase ‘If it harms none, do what you will’ to describe this approach to life. Pagan worship seeks to honour the divine powers and to bring the participants in harmony with them, to celebrate the turning of the seasons, and to mark the transitions of human life with appropriate rites of passage. Rituals usually begin with the creation of sacred space by the marking out of a symbolic circle and the blessing of those within. They may involve meditation, chanting, music, prayer, dance, poetry and the enactment of symbolic drama, together with the sharing of food and drink.

Places of worship

Paganism has no buildings dedicated as places of public worship. Instead, Pagans hold their ceremonies in woods, on hilltops, along the seashore, at standing stones, in parks, gardens and private homes.

Festivals

Nearly all Scottish Pagans celebrate a cycle of eight seasonal festivals known as the Wheel of the Year. These are Samhain, Midwinter or Yule, Imbolc, Spring Equinox, Beltane, Midsummer, Lughnasadh and Autumn Equinox.

Food and diet

For ethical reasons, most Pagans have a strong preference for foods derived from organic farming and free-range livestock rearing, while many are vegetarian or vegan.

Concerns of the community

Pagans regard nature as sacred and are deeply concerned by the damage inflicted by modern, industrialised societies on the natural world. Many regard environmental activism as a religious duty. Pagans honour Deity in female as well as male forms and strongly uphold equality of the sexes. Women play a very prominent role in Pagan religion. Pagans take it for granted that different people will experience the divine in different ways, and are thus very tolerant of other life-affirming religious beliefs. Proselytising is regarded as offensive and ill-mannered.

Sikhism

The Sikh faith is a distinct religion revealed through the teachings of the ten Gurus, the first of whom was Guru Nanak Dev Ji. He was born in 1469 CE in the Punjab, India. In 1708 the tenth and the last Guru in human form, Guru Gobind Singh Ji, vested spiritual authority in the Holy Sikh Scriptures known as the Guru Granth Sahib Ji and temporal authority in the community of initiated Sikhs, the Khalsa Panth.

The first Sikhs settled in Glasgow in the early 1920s and the first Gurudwara (the Sikh place of worship) in Scotland was established in South Portland Street Glasgow in the late 1940s. There are currently six Gurudwaras in Scotland, four in Glasgow, one in Edinburgh and one in Dundee.

Basic Beliefs

Sikhs strictly believe that there is One God, who is Nirgun (transcendent) and Sargun (immanent). While being absolute and beyond human comprehension, God can be realised and experienced through contemplation and service. The object of a Sikh’s life is to develop God consciousness and ultimately to receive God’s grace. Life presents the opportunity to do so through truthful living and selfless service in the context of a family life.

A Sikh’s way of life is guided by the following principles:

• Nam Simran – remembering and praying to God at all times
• Kirat Karna – earning a living by honest means
• Wand Shakna – sharing with the poor and needy
• Sewa – selfless service to God and humanity
• Equality – to treat all human beings as equals.

A Sikh practices purity of thought, purity of action, and respect and love for God’s Creation. He or she has been given the human form to practice dharma (spirituality).
Customs and practices
As in most religions there are varying degrees of commitment by the adherents, similarly practices of individual Sikhs may differ. However much of this information relates to Sikhs who have taken Amrit (initiated Sikhs) and need to adhere to particular religious practices. It is possible to be a Sikh and follow the Sikh philosophy but not to be initiated to be a Khalsa/Singh. Non-baptised Sikhs are not required to fulfil the five Ks and can have cut hair but in strict religious terms cannot bear the title of Singh/Kaur. Although many in the West use Singh/Kaur as a surname inherited from their ancestors rather than a title of initiation.

The tenth Guru, Guru Gobind Singh Ji, abolished distinctions of caste, colour, race or religion by introducing the concept of equality by making it obligatory for initiated Sikhs to a) share Amrit (holy water), b) adopt the same religious name of Singh (lion) for men and Kaur (princess) for women; c) wear five articles of faith, commonly known as the five K’s. These are: Kesh (uncut hair), Kangha (a small wooden comb), Kara (an iron/steel bangle), Kirpan (a short sword for defence) and Kachhera (special shorts). Although not mentioned in the five articles of faith, the daastar (turban) is an essential accompaniment, which is worn to maintain the sanctity of Kesh and is treated with utmost respect.

The Guru instructed Sikhs to say prayers in the early morning, at sunset and before retiring, to abstain from tobacco and drugs, due to their addictive properties. Intoxicants such as alcohol are not forbidden in the same way, but are to be used in moderation to promote self control; some Sikhs take this to mean total abstinence. The Guru also instructed Sikhs to contribute a minimum one-tenth of their wealth, mind and body for religious purposes or to the needy.

Main Festivals
A Sikh festival or holy day is called a Gurpurb: Remembrance Day or Day in Celebration. This usually refers to the birth or the death of the Gurus. Vaisakhi (13/14 April) celebrates the day in 1699 when Guru Gobind Singh Ji founded the order of the Khalsa, the community of initiated Sikhs. Diwali for the Sikhs (Oct/Nov) commemorates Guru Hargobind Ji’s return from imprisonment to the Harmandir Sahib (Golden Temple). The Sikh calendar year begins on 14th March according to the Nanakshahi Calendar.

Food and diet
Many initiated Sikhs are vegetarian. They also exclude fish, eggs and any food containing animal derivatives, and refrain from all intoxicants. Those Sikhs who eat meat, slaughter in a defined way known as ‘Jhatka’ (literally meaning sudden) and must not eat meat which is ritualistically slaughtered.

Concerns of the community
Sikhs have been part of the British community life for many centuries but there remains a poor understanding and appreciation of the Sikh way of life and principles. Government funding is required to maintain Sikh heritage, history and culture including the rich Punjabi language. Institutions such as hospitals, schools and social work departments need to be given clear guidelines of Sikh practices and that articles of faith cannot be removed, for example in cases of pupils taking PE classes in school, patients undergoing operations and travellers flying by air.

1 Introduction and statement of intent
1.1 The University of Glasgow is committed to promoting and implementing equality of opportunity in the learning, teaching, research and working environment, in relation to its Religion & Belief Equality Policy.
1.2 The University recognises the valuable present and potential contribution made by staff and students of different cultural, religious, non-religious and philosophical beliefs, which benefit the University community in respect of its learning, teaching, research, management, administration and support service activities.
1.3 The University seeks to eliminate all forms of direct and indirect Religion and Belief related discrimination, victimisation and harassment and supports the creation of a learning and working environment based on good relations.

2. Scope of the Policy
The Religion & Belief Equality Policy covers all members of the University community, including:
• All members of staff holding a contract of employment, staff from other institutions on placement at, or visiting the University
• All students, including visiting and placement students
• Visitors (where practicable), including persons using the University’s premises
• Contractors working at the University
• Individuals working or acting on the University’s behalf, including suppliers of goods and services.

3. The Policy
3.1 The University aims to ensure its community is treated with fairness, dignity and respect in relation to Religion and Belief equality.
3.2 The University has developed the Policy in compliance with and in the spirit of relevant legislation, specifically the Employment Equality (Religion and Belief) Regulations 2003 and Amendment Regulations 2007.
3.3 Religion and Belief will not be considered as one of the criteria in any decisions concerning student admissions, progression and support provision and learning and teaching (such as assessments, placement opportunities).
3.4 Religion and Belief will not be included in the criteria applied to staff recruitment and selection, career development, promotion and staff development opportunities, the terms of employment, transfer or training, performance management, application of employee relations procedures including discipline, capability and redundancy selection procedures.
3.5 Where possible, appropriate services such as prayer facilities, catering, observance of festivals, dress code, religious observance and leave are provided to meet the cultural and religious needs of all staff and students (see Appendix B).
3.6 The University aims to create a learning and working environment based on good relations between people of all religions or beliefs with a shared commitment to challenging and preventing stereotyping, prejudice, discrimination, and promoting respect for all.
3.7 Monitoring by Religion and Belief
(together with information on age, gender, ethnic origin and disability, and where practicable, on sexual orientation) will be recorded by the University to ensure that all people applying for jobs or for entry to degree programmes and courses are being fairly treated.

3.8 Under-represented groups are encouraged to apply for work and study at the University.

4. University Responsibilities
The University will ensure that:

4.1 Staff and students are made aware of the Religion & Belief Equality Policy through the University’s web pages, publications and, where appropriate, training.

4.2 It provides appropriate information on religious festivals and faith traditions to students and staff.

4.3 Publicity material reflects the diversity of the University’s community.

4.4 Staff and students are treated fairly, regardless of their Religion and Belief, and the University will take prompt action over alleged Religion and Belief discrimination or harassment. Existing procedures for staff and student complaints and discipline will be applied to ensure that they are handled in a just, fair, open and timely manner.

4.5 Staff involved in staff recruitment and student admissions selection panels should receive prior and follow-up training on equality and diversity matters.

4.6 Learning and teaching material, where practical, includes positive, non-stereotypical content for students of all faith and non-faith backgrounds.

4.7 External contractors will be made aware of their responsibility in relation to equality and diversity including Religion and Belief and will be required to comply with University policies and regulations.

4.8 As part of the Equality Impact Assessment (EIA) process, all University policies will be checked to ensure that no one receives less favourable treatment based on their Religion and Belief.

4.9 Managers view sympathetically requests from staff to take time off for religious observance and, where this cannot be accommodated, provide justifiable business/service reason(s).

4.10 Heads of School/Programme Conveners view sympathetically requests from students to take time off for religious observance and, where this cannot be accommodated, provide justifiable reason(s).

4.11 Accommodation and catering facilities are provided which, as far as practically possible, meet the different cultural and religious needs of members of the University community.

4.12 Honorary Chaplains/Advisers for faith communities and denominations are appointed to support staff and students.

5. Individual Responsibilities
The cooperation of all University staff, students, contractors and (where practicable) visitors is essential to ensure the success of this Policy. All individuals will be encouraged to:

5.1 Make themselves aware of the University’s Religion & Belief Policy.

5.2 Participate in training which supports the implementation of this Policy, as appropriate.

5.3 Where staff have particular faith-based requirements, it is their responsibility to inform their line manager, as necessary, and discuss how this can best be addressed within overall operational requirements. Staff are responsible for making up any time lost as a result of religious observance that is not covered by holiday or altered working arrangements.

5.4 Where students have particular faith-based requirements and wish to participate in faith-based events, they should request advance permission for absence from class(es) from the Head of School, Course Convener or other appropriate member of staff. However, it remains the student’s responsibility to catch up on any missed learning opportunities.

See Appendix B for information on absence for religious observance which might conflict with timetabling of classes and/or examinations.

6. Where to seek advice and further information (see also section 9)
Where staff and students perceive that they have been unfairly treated in respect of Religion and Belief, the following protocol applies:

6.1 Staff should speak to their Line Manager in the first instance. Further advice can be sought from the Human Resources Department, Equality and Diversity Unit, the Interfaith Chaplaincy or Trade Union.

6.2 Students should speak to their Advisor of Studies in the first instance. Further advice can be sought from the SRC Advice Centre, Equality and Diversity Unit, Interfaith Chaplaincy, Senate Office, Health, Safety & Wellbeing.
7. Monitoring
The Religion & Belief Equality Group (RBEG) will monitor the implementation of this Policy. Based on outcomes of monitoring the RBEG may recommend actions to the University’s Equality and Diversity Strategy Committee, as appropriate.

7.1 The University will monitor Religion and Belief equality for staff and student processes (where practicable), including:

- Staff: recruitment and selection, access to promotion, training, grievances and disciplinary procedures.
- Students: The University is investigating monitoring Religion and Belief in the new Campus Solutions – student records system.

7.2 Information collected for equality groups will be reported in the University’s Equality and Diversity Annual Report.

8. Relevance of the Religion & Belief Policy to the other University policies

8.1 This Religion & Belief Policy forms part of a suite of equality policies which reflect the University’s approach to equal opportunity and diversity: www.glasgow.ac.uk/equalitydiversity.

8.2 The University holiday entitlement policies for staff can be found at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/services/humanresources/policies/h-o/holidays.

8.3 Information on student policies can be found on the University’s Senate Office web page: http://senate.gla.ac.uk/publications.html.

8.4 Students seeking absence from classes or assessments for religious observance should consult the University’s Student Absence Policy at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/services/senateoffice/academic/studentpoliciesabsencepolicystudents/#d.en.105167.

8.5 Whilst it is the intention that staff requests for facilities for religious observance be addressed locally and balance the individual’s wishes and the service/business of the department, there may occasionally be disagreement. In this event the help of the Equality and Diversity Unit, the Interfaith Chaplaincy or of Human Resources may be sought. If the matter is not resolved, the member of staff may consider the use of the grievance procedure: www.glasgow.ac.uk/humanresources/policies/a-g/grievance.

Appendix A
Definition of religion, belief and discrimination

For the purposes of this Policy, ‘Religion and Belief’ is given an interpretation consistent with the human rights legislation and to this end includes religious and philosophical convictions (including atheism and agnosticism). This Policy covers individual thought, conscience or religious belief, and also collective manifestation of that opinion or belief with others.

Manifestation of freedom of thought, conscience and religion is not absolute, and intervention may be justified where this is considered necessary to protect the rights of others. The University recognises that it has a positive obligation to promote pluralism and tolerance, and this Policy cannot be interpreted by any group or person as conferring the right to engage in any activity or perform any act that interferes with or infringes upon the rights of others.

A.1 Direct discrimination
Direct discrimination is where people are treated unequally explicitly on grounds of their Religion and Belief and this cannot be justified. This includes treating a person less favourably because they are perceived to have a particular Religion and Belief, irrespective of whether that perception is right or wrong. It also includes treating a person less favourably because of someone else’s Religion and Belief, for example, the religion of their spouse or partner.

For example it is unlawful to:
• decide not to employ someone
• dismiss them
• refuse to provide them with training
• deny them promotion
• give them adverse terms and conditions because of their Religion and Belief.

A.2 Indirect discrimination
Indirect discrimination is the use of a provision, criterion or practice that is apparently neutral but places people of a Religion and Belief at a disadvantage compared with others, unless this can be justified. For example, a manager insists on holding his team meeting to review the week’s performance between 12.30pm-1.30pm on a Friday and the meeting regularly over-runs the stated time. Such a practice would disadvantage Muslim employees who attach particular importance to Friday mid-day prayers and would, therefore, be discriminatory if it could not be justified.

A.3 Victimisation
Discrimination by way of victimisation is when a person is treated less favourably than other persons by virtue of something that they have done in connection with Religion and Belief legislation. For example, making or intending to make a claim for discrimination; or having assisted a colleague to do so.

A.4 Bullying and harassment
Harassment, in terms of Religion and Belief, is defined as an unlawful act, in which a person’s conduct has the purpose or effect of either violating another’s dignity or creating an offensive environment for them. Bullying includes teasing, tormenting, name-calling, verbal or physical abuse and shouting. Harassment may not be specifically targeted at an individual but may be the result of behaviour that creates a particular environment or culture. A culture that, for example, tolerates the telling of religious jokes, the use of offensive slang in respect of different religions or beliefs or mocks practices associated with particular religions or beliefs, may be intimidating or hostile.

A.5 Discrimination, harassment or victimisation at the end of a working relationship
This covers issues such as verbal or written comments. If a manager made negative comments in a reference, for example, to an individual’s lack of flexibility, absence, etc. which occurs as a result of his/her Religion and Belief, the individual may have been discriminated against on the grounds of his/her Religion and Belief, even though his/her working relationship with the organisation has ended.

Appendix B
Code of Practice for Implementing the University Religion & Belief Policy

B.1 Religious observance
B.1.1 The University of Glasgow will make all reasonable efforts to provide suitable accommodation for prayer and religious observance or quiet contemplation where practical.

B.1.2 All staff, regardless of their Religion and Belief, are required to work in accordance with their contract. There is likely to be some flexibility over how the hours are worked whilst still meeting service/business needs. Heads of School/Line Managers should make every attempt to ensure that those whose religion requires them to pray at certain times during the day are enabled to do so through agreed flexible working arrangements. In addition, similar effort should be made to accommodate requests from those who require, for example, an extra hour for midday prayer on Friday, or not to work beyond sunset on Friday, or at the weekends in ways that conflict with their religious beliefs. Similar requests from students should also be considered sympathetically.

B.2 Leave for religious festivals and extended leave
B.2.1 In the UK, some public holidays coincide with Christian religious festivals and holiday arrangements. In the interests of equality, those practising religions other than Christianity may request annual leave entitlement on the dates most significant to them. These days should be agreed with the Head of School/Line Manager before timetables or assessment dates are drawn up. Requests for holiday entitlement to be taken at times of religious significance, the dates of which are uncertain in certain religions (e.g. based on the lunar calendar) will be treated sympathetically. The number of annual leave days overall will remain as in the contract of employment for staff of any religious belief or none.

B.2.2 Staff may request occasional extended leave associated with religious/cultural needs. Line Managers should attempt to accommodate requests for extended leave for the purpose of, for example, going on pilgrimage. If the extended leave exceeds the annual holiday entitlement, the excess days will be counted as unpaid leave.

B.2.3 If unclear, advice should be sought from the Equality and Diversity Unit, the Interfaith Chaplaincy or Human Resources Department.

B.3 Assessments, examinations, interviews and placements
B.3.1 The University expects each student to take full responsibility for their academic work and academic progress, including class/placement attendance, assessed assignments and examinations.

B.3.2 However, the University recognises that there are circumstances where students may require to be absent, including religious observance, where the nature of the observance prevents attendance at a class or classes.

B.3.3 Heads of Schools, Directors of Services and Examination Officers should consider the main religious festivals when drawing up assessment, examination and interview dates (for student admissions and staff appointments).

B.3.4 Reasonable requests from students for extensions to assessment submission deadlines to accommodate religious observance should be considered sympathetically, but only if requests are received as soon as the deadlines are announced.

B.3.5 Consideration in examination timetabling requirements will be given to requests from students whose religious observance may result in absence on certain week days or at weekends, or at other times for specific religious festivals, but only if such requests are made early around the time of class enrolment. Later requests, especially if made after examination timetables have been published, may not be granted.

B.3.6 Similar consideration (as in B.3.5) would be given to students on placements.

B.4 Dietary requirements
B.4.1 The University of Glasgow is committed to providing specific dietary requirements. Questions about or suggestions for extending the scope of provision should be sent to Hospitality Services.

B.4.2 Hospitality Services maintain contact with appropriate external suppliers who can cater for specific dietary requirements.

B.5 Dress code
B.5.1 The University does not operate a dress code for staff and students, except for uniformed staff (such as janitorial, security and hospitality staff) and those staff and students required to wear protective clothing, for example, in laboratories and workshops.

B.5.2 Students on placement visits may be required to follow particular dress codes, for example dental and medical students on placement in the National Health Service (NHS).
B.5.3 The wearing of religious and cultural dress, including clerical collars, headscarves, turbans and kipa (skull cap) is allowed and must not be discouraged. The exception to this is where the health, safety and welfare of the person is compromised by the wearing of such dress or where this is likely to enhance the risk to other persons or where communication is hindered.

The following points should be noted:

- Some religions and cultures determine a certain mode of dress. For example, the wearing of compulsory items such as Kara (bangles) by Sikh men and women
- Wearing of clothes displaying obscene material, in any language, or which are in some other way offensive and may breach national law, for example, sectarian or racist slogans will be considered a breach of this Policy and other University policies and regulations. The University upon receipt of a complaint may take appropriate action
- Where necessary, the EDU or Interfaith Chaplaincy may be contacted to assist with disseminating appropriate information explaining cultural dress and customs. Advice relating to protective clothing may be sought from the Department of Health, Safety and Wellbeing.

B.6 Unacceptable actions or behaviour

The University Religion & Belief Policy aims to ensure equal and fair treatment for everyone, of any religion or none. It is based on the principle that people have the right to their own belief system but not to engage in activities or acts which interferes with the rights and beliefs of others:

- Any behaviour or actions that are deemed to breach this Policy will be treated seriously by the University and may result in disciplinary action.
- Any attempt at coercing or threatening others to comply with a particular belief system, for example through unauthorised distribution of literature or through threats or offensive remarks, may result in disciplinary action.
- The University does not tolerate offensive literature or graffiti on its premises and those found to be responsible are liable to disciplinary action.
- Examples of unacceptable behaviours are contained within the University Policy on Harassment for staff at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/equalitydiversity/harassmentpolicy.
- The harassment statement for students is at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/equalitydiversity/harassment/students.
- The Code of Practice on Unacceptable Behaviour is at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/media/media_126377_en.pdf.

B.7 Faith and reflection facilities and information on campus and in the local vicinity

- The University’s Chapel is located in the West Quadrangle, Gilmorehill campus and open to people of all religions and belief and non-belief for prayers, reflection and meditation.
- The Interfaith Chaplaincy provides an interfaith room in the basement floor (next to 1A the Café) for prayers or quiet contemplation. This can be used by students and staff and can be booked via Chaplaincy staff by members of any faith or belief. Further dedicated space is provided on the third floor of the Library and the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine (Garscube campus). A copy of the Religion & Belief Guide can be found at: www.glasgow.ac.uk/media/media_127481_en.pdf.

The Interfaith Chaplaincy also provides storage facilities and aids for worship in support of various faith societies.

This Religion & Belief Guide is available for staff and students to raise awareness about the needs of different cultural and religious communities. Information on other local faith facilities can be obtained from the Interfaith Chaplaincy (see Section 9.2): www.glasgow.ac.uk/chaplaincy/faithbeliefcommunities.

The Interfaith Chaplaincy facilities are enhanced by other faith provisions in the vicinity (walking distance) of the main University campus including the Catholic Chaplaincy based at Turnbull Hall, 13-15 South Park Terrace, a Mosque on Oakfield Avenue, and the Wellington Church on University Avenue.
Appendix C
Equality Monitoring

C.1 Introduction
The University is committed to promoting equality in all its activities and aims to provide a work, learning, teaching and research environment free from discrimination and unfair treatment.

Legally (disability, gender and race legislation) the University is required to:
• promote equality of opportunity
• eliminate unlawful discrimination
• promote positive attitudes
• foster good relations between different communities.

In addition, the University is committed to monitoring information on age, sexual orientation and Religion and Belief where appropriate.

The equality legislation also requires public authorities, such as universities, to conduct Equality Impact Assessments on policies and practices, including learning and teaching.

The Equality Impact Assessment (EIA) is a systematic and evidence based process which verifies that policies and practices at the University are fair and inclusive. It aims to meet the legitimate needs of the diverse groups that make up the University community of students and staff.

Equality monitoring is a key process for the successful implementation of equality and diversity policies, action plans and implementing Equality Impact Assessments. Monitoring assists with highlighting positive or negative trends within our University.

Racial origin, like gender and disability, are matters of fact and it is not unlawful to categorise people. However, it is against the law to treat people unfairly because of their background.

The monitoring categories used at the University are in accordance with the Census Office and the Higher Education Statistical Agency (HESA). The University is required to provide annual statistical returns to HESA.

C.2 What does the University intend to do with the information collected?
The University would use the monitoring information to assist with measuring the quality of experience for diverse groups of students and staff, including:
• identify needs of students and staff
• how these are being met/addressed
• whether there are implications for staff development for raising awareness of students and staff to ensure there is no stereotyping
• whether additional resources are required.

The University envisages using the information to work with staff and students to address their needs and thereby help to mainstream equality and diversity and also effectively discharge our legal responsibility.

Appendix D
University Religion & Belief Equality Group

Remit:
• To promote cultural diversity whereby Religion and Belief equality is incorporated into all the University’s functions and activities
• To foster good relations and understanding between faith and belief communities on campus
• To act as a channel of communication where issues affecting Religion and Belief issues can be raised and addressed or referred to appropriate bodies for action
• To oversee the preparation of the annual progress report

• To review the Religion & Belief Equality Group membership and remit annually and to co-opt additional members to the Group as may be required.

Reporting Line
The Equality and Diversity Strategy Committee, liaising widely with other committees, managers and officers to promote Religion and Belief equality on campus.

1 All staff include – full and part time, sessional and honorary staff.
3 The regulations [number 14] provide religious organisations with an exemption from the general requirements where it can be established that it is necessary to comply with the doctrine of the organisation and to avoid conflicting with the strongly held religious convictions of a significant number of the religion’s followers.
4 The University of Glasgow may apply a genuine occupational requirement in accordance with legislation to certain posts, for example when appointing Chaplains / Advisers.
5 The University will work within the rules of the appropriate pension schemes for employees.
6 The Equality and Diversity Unit (EDU) is responsible for providing guidance and support on how to conduct EIA on policy practice.
7 Titles used within the Policy reflect the current structure of the University.
8 Justifiable reasons may include: examination timetabling constraints; late notification of absence requirements; courses requiring 100% attendance for the award off credit could have elements such as laboratories, workshops or placements which cannot be rescheduled for practical reasons.
9 Nominations of individuals suitable to be considered for appointment as Honorary Chaplain / Adviser are made by religious bodies which are members of the Scottish Inter Faith Council and in the case of Christian denominations, must also be members of Action of Churches Together in Scotland (ACTS).
10 Titles used within the Policy reflect the current structure of the University.
11 In 2007 the University of Glasgow became the first university in the UK to gain an official ‘Sunflower Standard’ accreditation from the Vegan Society.
12 Employment Act 1986, sections 11 and 12, Sikhs allowed to wear turbans at school. Sikhs play cricket in correct contraption. Sikhs allowed to wear turbans in place of crash helmets. Manderi v Lee (1983), House of Lords court decision, Sikh children allowed to wear turbans at school.
13 Azi v Kirklees (EAT 30 march 2007), Azi, a schoolteacher, lost her case when the Employment Appeal Tribunal reasonably concluded that her communication had been impaired when she was wearing the veil.
